The Data Protection Act 2018 is the UK’s implementation of the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR).

Everyone responsible for using personal data has to follow strict rules called ‘data protection principles’. They must make sure the information is:

used fairly, lawfully and transparently

used for specified, explicit purposes

used in a way that is adequate, relevant and limited to only what is necessary

accurate and, where necessary, kept up to date

kept for no longer than is necessary

handled in a way that ensures appropriate security, including protection against unlawful or unauthorised processing, access, loss, destruction or damage

There is stronger legal protection for more sensitive information, such as:

race

ethnic background

political opinions

religious beliefs

trade union membership

genetics

biometrics (where used for identification)

health

sex life or orientation

The workshop provides a basic insight into aspects of:

- What is personal data.
- An introduction / recap on the GDPR and data protection legislation.
- The key principles that organisations must comply with.
- An introduction to lawful bases (legal reasonings for processing personal data): explore personal data processed by the organisation and brainstorm how lawful bases will apply.
- The rights that individuals have with regards to their own personal data and what organisations must do to meet those rights.
- An introduction to “Subject Access Requests” – perform a live example of how an organisation would actively deal with an information request compliantly from an initial correspondence to response.
- Data breach; an introduction, stats, and examples.
- How to respond to a data breach
- Data breach prevention.
- Impacts of non-compliance.
